Five people are talking about the plan of having a night market in their neighborhood.

Mag: Oh, dear. ...With or without the flu, I just can't stand the noise or the smell of a night market, let alone the trash all over the ground.

Greg: Oh boy! I just can't wait to have one. I am bored with staying at home so quietly. How I miss all the delicious snacks! Even the great noise sounds like melody to me .

Gina: Come on! Are you kidding me? Can you picture that a person tastes his favorite food with a mask over the nose and the mouth?

Bob: Over my dead body! Can anybody tell me what happened to our governor? A night market when there are many people having the H1-N1flu!

Fred: I agreed with Bob in the first place. But since I am out of job and I really need money to support my family. If there is a new night market here, I think I can start my new business with a food stand there. I'm really good at baking.

I look like an old truck, but in fact I am something else. I came from the outer space, a very far away star. Long time ago, I lost my home, the whole star, in a terrible war. Our people had to run away to a new place to live. So I came to the earth. It is very hot here, but it is okay for me. People here are very nice. My "owner ", Mr. Brown, is a good farmer. Now I help him by changing to a truck to take the vegetables from his farm to the market. At night, I turn to a big dog to keep the farm safe. I know I am fine here, but I am still waiting for my people to come and find me. Maybe we can have a new home here.
